

Hey! You must be a very creative sculptor. Wow! I think with this great sculptural rendition and ideas, the country is capable of producing her own functional and decorative needs.

You're perfectly right. One of the things African nations must do is to put artists and scientists in a well-resourced Artist-in-Residence programme and task them to develop and produce daily useful modern gadgets and other stuff.

You mean artists and scientists must collaborate?

Yes. Art and science are inseparable. When both areas are well-developed, greater results would be achieved. That's what Art and Science departments in African universities have failed to do. Besides, it is one of the reasons why Africa cannot tap her own rich natural resources for her own benefit.

Oh I see! You're revealing the secret. That's why Africa has placed no major modern visual artistic and technological invention into the basket of the art world.

African universities must prioritize the study of Art and Science to produce knowledgeable graduates to contribute to modern artistic and technological inventions
